

Two-day Workshop on Extreme Rainfall Events and Risk Management

February 9-10, 2026

Organized by:

Department of Physics
Assam University, Silchar
Assam, India

THE CONNECTION

Recent years have seen the North-East, and Silchar in particular, face unprecedented challenges from extreme rainfall. Beyond the data and the models lie the lives and livelihoods of our community. This workshop is not just a scientific meeting; it is a collaborative platform to turn meteorological insights into life-saving actions. Join us as we bridge the gap between complex physics and community safety to ensure a more resilient tomorrow.

Dr. Utpal Sarkar, AUS
Dr. Bidhan Mahanta, AUS
Dr. Swarnadeep Biswas, AUS
Dr. Mahananda Baro, AUS

ELIGIBILITY

The target audience include PG, PhD. students and other stakeholders with a basic understanding of atmospheric science across various disciplines. Our sessions are designed to be simple and clear, making the science of rainfall accessible to people from all backgrounds. Whether you are studying the atmosphere or making decisions for the city, this program will give you the tools to understand, prepare for, and manage the risks of heavy rainfall with special emphasis on Northeast India
