

A Short Term Course On Research Aptitude and capacity building for Post Covid Prospects

Background

COVID-19 has unleashed unprecedented economic and social hardship around the world. The abrupt and extremely harsh response to COVID-19 pandemic in India has aggravated social and economic deprivations and inequalities. With each passing day in the unprecedented crisis situation around COVID-19 pandemic, we are being witness to pre-existing inequalities and injustices that have been laid out around us. The resolve and strength of people's movements and resistance feel more pertinent today as ever felt in the history of such struggles. These inevitably have a serious adverse impact on different facets of human life. COVID-19 crisis and the "lockdown" has gendered impact in terms of workload and reduced economic opportunities, lack of access to health facilities, nutrition and increase in incidence of gender-based violence, communalization and racialization along with stigma associated with COVID. Under this backdrop it's crucial to build people's voices and movements on health for all, the critical inter-linkages of gender and its intersectionality with social, economic and political determinants of health; identities of race, caste, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation; varied geographies, and contexts become an extremely important area to look into. With this background the department of Social work, Assam University, Silchar poses to organize a short term course on "Research Aptitude and capacity building for Post Covid Prospects" followed by Panel Discussions and paper presentations from experts with the following themes.

Themes of Call for Papers

- ❑ Mental Health In times of Covid 19 and beyond
